

Workshop
on ‘Goat farming for livelihood security of farmers of Uttarakhand under changing climatic scenario’

Organized by
ICAR-Indian Veterinary Research Institute, Mukteswar campus
(22nd February, 2019)

ICAR-Indian Veterinary Research Institute, Mukteswar campus is organizing a workshop on “Goat farming for livelihood security of farmers of Uttarakhand under changing climatic scenario” on 22nd February, 2019, 9.00 AM onwards at Mukteswar. The objectives of the workshop are to educate, encourage and empower the farmers by exchanging their views with distinguished experts, scientists and extension personnel on scientific goat rearing under changing climatic scenario. A large number of farmers and stakeholders are expected to attend the event. The officials from the Govt. of Uttarakhand, scientists from various institutes, representatives of NGOs and KVKs will interact with the farmers in this event to update them on new technological information on goat husbandry and allied sectors. In addition, kisan goshi and animal science exhibition will also be organized for awareness of farmers about improved technologies/products in the areas of animal husbandry, agriculture and horticulture.