World Environment Day- 2024

The World Environment Day -2024 was celebrated at Indian Veterinary Research Institute, Bengaluru campus on 05-06-2024. All the scientists, staff, students and fellows were actively participated in the programme. Currently, up to 40% of the world's land is degraded, impacting around 3.2 billion people globally due to desertification. Moreover, projections suggest that by 2050, over three-quarters of the world's population will be affected by drought (unep.org). Human-induced environmental damage is escalating, with serious consequences such as climate change, ecosystem loss, and land desertification. It is our duty as the current generation to protect the environment and restore land and nature to their natural state. In this context all the employees of IVRI, Bengaluru campus were motivated to plant a sapling wherever possible along with slogan “Our land. Our future. We are #GenerationRestoration”. Followed by plantation and campus cleanliness drive was conducted.
